This course will discuss the general services provided by Public Health and Safety in the field. The Division of Environmental Health Services (DEHS) is the agency designated by the State of California and the County of San Bernardino to enforce laws and regulations regarding food protection, recreational health, safe drinking water, wastewater, solid waste, land-use and emergency operation response. The services provided by DEHS are crucial to promoting public health and safety. The course is a 1½ hours training and is intended for all county employees.

Please note that all participants attending this training must be in accordance with DBH Dress Code Policy.

All DBH Staff encouraged to attend
