San Francisco Regional Office To Close September 30, 2009

As you are aware, California's budget problems have required that every public agency reduce spending and look for more efficient ways of operating. One way the Secretary of State's office can do this is to consolidate processes that have a limited impact on the general public. After careful review of both staff and community needs, the San Francisco regional office will be closing to the public September 30, 2009.

Please know this decision was not reached quickly or easily. We recognize that the decision to close the San Francisco office will have an impact on Californians in the San Francisco area and apologize for any inconvenience.

For services, you may continue to mail documents to Sacramento or deliver them in person at 1500 11th Street, Sacramento, CA 95814. To find a complete list of available services and public counter locations, please visit us online at www.sos.ca.gov, Business Programs, Contact Information Page or the Regional Offices Page.

We thank you for your patience as we work through these difficult times, and look forward to serving you on the web, by mail, or in person in our Sacramento, Los Angeles or San Diego offices.
